

Amazon Cute Doctor,

Tiger Team members Jose, Eric, Tyyotalle, and Olis are working for Amazon during Summer 2026 to gain hands-on experience with AI in the real world (Internship).

After a few weeks, the Tiger Team faced problems, especially Olis and Tyyotalle.

My main complaint is that Amazon's mishandling, particularly regarding Olis's healthcare and delivery needs, resulted in harm to Olis. I am Olis's private doctor. Olis and his Tiger Team from Houston City College worked on the elevator using Machine Learning.

During their time at Amazon corporate, Olis and his Tiger Team were involved in an incident in which Olis's finger became stuck in the elevator while they were using deep learning technology. This caused a malfunction in the elevator vision system, resulting in a finger injury. Joe fainted and required ambulance transport for further treatment.

I am also upset because Olis's finger, previously bitten by a cat (a former Lone Star College student now at Amazon), was not treated properly.

Joe is still in Ben Taub Hospital, and according to his doctor, there is a 50% chance he might not finish his summer courses.

Eric was the only member unharmed and helped bring the team to safety. He is angry with Olis for being lazy and for not responding to his email about the Anthropogenic and Patent task.

These incidents undermine trust in Amazon's remote health work using Deep Learning and Machine Learning.

Amazon delivered Olis's medicine to an incorrect address, resulting in Olis being taken to the ER at the hospital in Cypress, Texas.

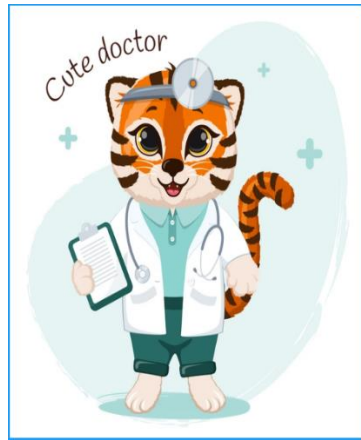

Cypress has many hospitals, but it is unclear whether this is helpful.

We hope the Tiger Team recovers and completes its AI work soon.

I think students in Houston City College (HCC) need to be trained how to handle Internship otherwise they would become troublemakers like Olis.
